The School of International Relations at AGS in Paris offers a two-year Master of Arts in International Relations and Diplomacy

- Optional concentrations in African Studies and Middle Eastern Studies.
- High academic standard with a curriculum that is both theoretical and practical.
- Students research, write and defend a thesis of 25,000-30,000 words.
- Students may earn a double degree:
  - Master of Arts in International Peace and Conflict Resolution (Arcadia University, USA)
  - French Master in Diplomacy and Strategic Negotiation (Université Paris Sud, France)
  - LL.M. in French and European Law (Université Cergy-Pontoise, France)
- Graduate Study Abroad options.

- AGS students and faculty are from USA, as well as many other countries, thus creating an exciting multicultural atmosphere in the classroom.
- Paris is a perfect platform to study international relations as it is host to many intergovernmental organizations, NGOs and international corporations.
- AGS students take full advantage of this wealth of opportunity: guest speakers address them in class, visits are organized and internships are strongly encouraged.
- Although French is not an admission requirement, a low intermediate level is necessary to graduate. Students may study French with our partner institution, the Alliance Française.
- AGS alumni are to be found within international institutions, the private sector, non-government organizations, intergovernmental organizations, diplomatic service, journalism, and academia.

- Financial aid available: US Federal loans, scholarships, French bank loans and more
- French health insurance and part-time work permit eligibility

For further information contact us at admissions@ags.edu
We will be pleased to answer any inquiries you may have.

www.ags.edu