Biography
Andrew Canessa is a social anthropologist and has been with the University of Essex since 1989. Much of his career has been spent working with indigenous peoples of Latin America, and he has conducted long term field work (25 years) in an Aymara speaking community of highland Bolivia. His research interests are ethnic and racial identities, gender, sexuality, indigenous mobilisations and postcolonial scholarship (e.g., Intimate Indigeneities: Race, Sex and History in the Small Spaces of Andean Life, Duke University Press). His work is published widely in Spanish as well as English as he seeks to ensure his research is disseminated to non English speakers, especially in Latin America. He also enjoys collaborating with Latin American scholars and edited a volume with Aida Hernández Género, complementariedades y exclusiones en Mesoamérica y los Andes published by the UN through IWGIA, bringing together scholars from across the continent. His current project is an ESRC funded oral history project looking at changing Gibraltarian identities in the 20th century. The outputs current include several articles as well as two book contracts and the project has enjoyed considerable media interest.

Biography
Tancrede is a Second Class degree Law undergraduate who came from France to the University of Essex in October 2014. During his time at university he was closely involved with the Students’ Union, taking executive roles within the Amnesty International and Debating societies as well as working for the on campus nightclub, SubZero.

As the newly elected President, Tancrede is keen on enhancing the student experience, while maintaining a good, nevertheless challenging relationship between the Students’ Union and the University. He is passionate about human rights and equality, encouraging students to fight for the people who cannot fight for themselves, moreover not to take education for granted. As an international student, he embraces the diversity of Essex University and believes that we should recognise, accept and celebrate our differences. He is a great believer that education has the power to change lives and is committed to delivering on student feedback.

Professor Anthony Forster

Biography

Professor Anthony Forster is the sixth Vice-Chancellor of the University of Essex, and he took up his post in 2012.

Anthony is a political scientist and his work has focussed on the duty of care owed by the state and society to service personnel. Anthony has published 11 books and nearly 50 articles and chapters. He is an elected Academician of the Academy of the Social Sciences (2009). Between 1999 and 2002, Anthony was the Special Advisor to the House of Lords Select Committee on the European Union Common Foreign and Security Policy.

Following a first degree in Politics from the University of Hull and a commission in the Army, Anthony read for an MPhil and a DPhil in European Politics at the University of Oxford. He held posts at the University of Nottingham, King's College London. In 2002, Anthony joined the University of Bristol a Professor of Politics and International Relations and was Head of the Department of Politics from 2004 to 2006. He then moved to Durham University to take up the post of PVC Faculty of Social Sciences and Health before becoming Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Education) in 2008 and Deputy Vice-Chancellor in 2011.

Anthony is equally committed to excellence in research and education. He completed a Postgraduate Certificate in Academic Practice and has been a Fellow of the Higher Education Academy since 2007.

Anthony has been a Board Member of the Higher Education Academy, the Equality Challenge Unit and the Leadership Foundation in Higher Education. His public service commitments includes chairing the independent government review of the Defence Advisory Notice (D Notice) System, a voluntary system established to limit the inadvertent media disclosure of information where release would pose a risk to life or to national security (2014-15). Between 2012-2017, he was as a Board member and trustee of the Blue Cross charity which provides nationwide support for pet owners who cannot afford private veterinary treatment and helps to find homes for unwanted animals.

Biography

Timo Jütten is a senior lecturer in Philosophy and currently the Head of the School of Philosophy and Art History (SPAH). He came to Essex in 2011, following appointments at the Rijksuniversiteit Groningen (The Netherlands) and University College Dublin (Ireland). He also is a member of the Human Rights Centre and a researcher for the ESRC-funded Human Rights, Big Data and Technology project. Timo has been a member of Senate since 2015 and has also served as Director of Graduate Studies and Director of Postgraduate Studies (Taught) in SPAH.

Timo’s current research is on social and political philosophy and in particular on commodification and the moral limits of markets. He currently works on papers that try to understand how competition and competitiveness shape social relationships. As part of this research, he also has a longstanding interest in how marketization changes the nature of higher education. Other research interests include Kant and German Idealism, philosophy and gender, and the philosophical foundations of human rights.

Timo also has been active in the University and College Union. Before becoming a Head, he was a member of the local branch committee and (briefly) the chair of its REF committee.
