History PhD Students

Postgraduate Research milestones are used to ensure students are making sufficient progress during their studies, and to provide a supportive framework to guide students through the various stages of their research. The Milestones should also help to keep students on track to submit within the appropriate period. PGR supervisors should talk through the relevant milestones during supervisory meetings and they should be referred to on a regular basis.

Supervisory Panels and Research Students' Progress Boards will use the milestones to reflect on the level of progress being made, ahead of making a recommendation. Whilst the milestones are specific for each department and type of course, it is recognised that every research journey is different, and that whilst the milestones provide an overarching framework of expectations, a degree of flexibility should be given, based on the trajectory and scope of research.

Students and supervisors are encouraged to supplement these milestones with individual research plans which take into account the specifics of an individual research project and the individual circumstances of the PGR student.

M1.2	Choose research topic and demonstrate significance/impact of research with a Research Project Proposal (6000 words), including (dependent on subject area): <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Write central research problem/questions to be answered. • Identify preliminary argument. • Methodological considerations – explain rationale for selecting primary sources; consider strengths and limitations of primary sources; identify approaches or analytical tools used by scholars for similar sources; specify methods informing analysis or might be needed. • Feasibility Report – identify primary sources (and their location), access to sources, travel required, and ethical considerations. • Create project plan, outlining objectives for each stage. Note - The proposal must be detailed and be significantly more in-depth than the proposal submitted when applying. It must reflect ongoing research.	2	2/3

Has the student and supervisory team considered whether the research will be using human participants, and if so, has sought and received formal university ethics approval.

Has the student and supervisory team considered whether the research uses security-sensitive material, and if so, has sought and received formal university registration of this material.

The Supervisory Panel will make a recommendation to the Research Students' Progress Board, ahead of the next academic year. Further information regarding Supervisory Panels and Research
