

Are you a gender diverse psychology professional?

If so, we'd love to hear your experiences of receiving clinical supervision!

Who am I?

My name is Oliver Watts (he/him/his). I am a gay Trainee Clinical Psychologist undertaking a Doctorate in Clinical Psychology at Newcastle University. This research will be my thesis.

What is the study about?

We want to understand gender diverse psychology professionals experiences of clinical supervision.

We want to hear your experiences of the good, the bad, and the ugly to understand what factors would make clinical supervision affirming of your gender identity.

Considering the current socio-political climate in the United Kingdom, it is crucial that clinical supervisors are equipped to support gender-diverse people in navigating the unique challenges they may encounter at home and in work. This support not only benefits the clinicians on an individual level but may also benefit their clinical practice as well.

Who can take part?

To be involved you need to:

- Be 18 years old or older.
- Identify as gender diverse (e.g., transgender, non-binary, agender, genderqueer).
- Have received clinical supervision for at least one year.
- Received clinical supervision while working in a clinical based/professional psychology role from any area of psychological work.

Scan me for more info!

What does taking part involve?

You will need to attend an online interview lasting around 1 hour. In this interview, you will be asked questions about your experiences of clinical supervision.

Interested?

If you would like to take part or have any questions please contact me by emailing:
O.Watts2@Newcastle.ac.uk

Supervised by Dr Rowan Tinlin-Dixon (she/her/hers), Clinical Psychologist in NRGDS.

This study has been approved by the Newcastle University Research Ethics Committee.
Reference number: 2958